E.J. Hughes Paints Vancouver Island

Robert Amos
Author & Artist

Every four years or so, E. J. Hughes would leave his studio and devote the summer to making detailed drawings of new locations for use in future paintings. In 1986, he made day trips along the south-east coast of Vancouver Island, travelling north from Finlayson Arm as far as a place near Ladysmith which he called Evening Cove.

Hughes sent his first painting of Evening Cove to Montreal's Dominion Gallery on January 13, 1987. It was a canvas 25" by 32" (63.5 x 81.3 cm) for which he was paid $10,000. For the back of the painting, Hughes wrote out his usual descriptive label: "At the extreme end of a long road on a peninsula east of Ladysmith, a town 17 miles north of here (Duncan), Mrs. Pat Salmon, my biographer, and I came upon this already composed and dramatic landscape while searching for suitable motifs for future landscape paintings. I returned there several times later to sketch the scene in pencil, and write down the colours."

In his letter to the gallery Hughes went on: "The whiteness of the patch of beach on the other side of the cove is caused by thousands of tiny broken fragments of white sea-shells." Clearly, this is a shell midden. It is located in the next bay south of Kulleet Bay, home to a First Nations village for thousands of years.

But you won't find Evening Cove on the map. Pat Salmon explained the name to me: "We found this lovely little bay, a beautiful little place. We weren't really sure what it was called until Jane (Cole) told me that it was Coffin Point. I thought: "Oh dear, dear", because as far as Hughes was concerned, if he saw the term 'coffin' he'd run away. Somewhere else I saw the name 'Evening Cove', and so I said to Ed that the bay was called Evening Cove."

"It's not like I want to change the history books, but for his peace of mind it became Evening Cove - a much nicer name than Coffin Point, don't you think?"

In the spring of 1987 Hughes and Pat Salmon had a visit from Michel Moreault, who had taken over as director of the Dominion Gallery after Max Stern's death. In her diary, Pat Salmon wrote: "Moreault landed at Cassidy Airport south of Nanaimo early in the afternoon. "That must be the tiniest airport in the world," he told me. We took him to various sketching sites and the weather was perfect. The best pictures I took of that happy day are all of Evening Cove. Seeing it, Moreault realized the truth in Hughes' colours. He remarked on the whiteness of the shell beach, and the true emerald in the waters along the point. I think he was exceptionally lucky to have seen it first through the Hughes paintings."

Adopt an Area
LitterHeroes for Earth Day and Beyond!

Kim Barnard

Secretary-President
Story Gatherer

“Why should I pick up other people’s garbage?” When debris and glass are left behind in our public spaces and habitats, it harms everyone. Wildlife of all sizes and species could ingest it, or get stuck in it, or be polluted by it. Pets might suffer as well! Bare feet might step on it (or in it!) at our parks and beaches. If you see it, you CAN do something about it!

“LitterHeroes unite!” Just as we look to be good neighbours and friends, we can all be caring members of LitterWatch. This is a united effort to look after the areas of Shawnigan that we frequent and enjoy, for the benefit of all. Our wish is for individuals, families, neighbourhoods and businesses to adopt an area and to let us know so that we can work together to cover our whole community. Please talk to us to get inspiration, supplies and support. It’s a super mood booster to exercise your privilege in the camaraderie of kind, Collective action.

“Thank you!” We’re so grateful for the dedicated support of our waste management providers, Fisher Rd Recycling / DL’s Bins Ltd. and P.A.N. Disposal. We also receive resources from the CVRD, plus guidance from Encon Services Inc. and our community safety partners including our Shawnigan Fire Hall volunteers. Funding support is such an encouragement, from local businesses like Unsworth Vineyards and the Island Return-It

South Cowichan depot, as well as others yet to be confirmed! We’re looking forward to featuring our growing list of Litter Heroes... thank you all!

“Join us!” We are encouraging everyone to participate in the upcoming Earth Day “Hearts in Action” Shawnigan Community Clean Up on Saturday, April 22nd from 10am-2pm!

Cowichan South Arts Guild
The Art of Storytelling

Theresa Zip
Cowichan South
Arts Guild

A Cowichan South Arts Guild and Shawnigan Lake Museum collaboration

We had a very well attended, magical evening of storytelling in our Village, in early March. SLCC’s round room was transformed into a cozy extended living room, welcoming four professional storytellers: Respected Quw’utsn Elder Quayhwulthw (Robert George); Actor/Educator Sylvia Swift; Community Builder Eshu Martin; and Storyteller-of-many-hats Tad Hargrave. Each highlighted a different style of storytelling, which really provided a rich sampling of the ART that telling stories IS. From the humorous interactive story told by Quayhwulthw (with masks & help from audience volunteers!) through longer philosophical stories of Eshu Martin and Tad Hargrave, to the engaging, warm storytelling style of Sylvia Swift, the audience was spellbound, transported to different lands and times. The stories each had many layers of connection to the audience: musical, physical, ancestral wisdom, some hilarious ‘gotcha’ moments, deeper meaning to ponder, and pure escape. A delicious feast of refreshments provided by Brugos rounded out the evening.

In addition, the storytelling theme, which stretched over 3 days, included a delightful StoryTheatre production for families on Saturday afternoon - (1002 Nights, by Izad Etemadi), and a Dragon Puppet- making Workshop for youth filling a rainy Sunday afternoon. All events were free to the public, with workshops, just the annual membership (the best local bargain at $15 for individuals or $20 for families). Feedback has been so positive that we may need to make this more than just an annual event - stay posted, and feel free to volunteer to get involved! Contact: hello@cowichansouthartsguild.

Food choices create food systems

Jared Qwustenuxun Williams, (he/him)
Writer & Educator

I've talked extensively on how when we eat Salish smoked salmon, we support the food system that created it. Basically, the greater the demand for Salish smoked salmon the more resources its food system gets to produce it...in the end, the bigger and more dynamic its food system can become. These Indigenous food systems support Indigenous languages, technologies, harvesting protocols, teachings, and culture. Most of the time that's where my story ends.

But there is another side to the story. One, I guess, I always felt was implied. Maybe, just for fun, I'll make it clearer.

When we eat food from fast food chains, the demand for fast food grows. Now there are five Tim Hortons in Duncan. But I ain't here to hate on Tim's, it's just a relevant example. Providing food to businesses like Tim's are companies like Sysco, GFS, and other wholesalers. These are underpinned further by big food suppliers who are at near food monopoly levels. Grocery stores, restaurants, and fast-food places almost exclusively get their food from these suppliers. Sadly, when I look at this western food system, I see so much pain and exploitation. The way plants and animals are treated. The way entire countries are treated. The way human beings are treated. Everywhere I look in capitalist food I see suffering.

There are ways to get out of it. Things like supporting local food suppliers, turning lawns into gardens, and raising animals are all great ways if you have enough land or money to make the choice. But, at city levels, where people have no land and limited income, a food system needs to be outsourced and sustainable.

Looking at Salmon Management on our coasts I can tell you this food system isn't sustainable. Considering that we live in a place where people thrived for countless generations using old aquaculture and permaculture practices. We have more people now, sure, but there is no reason that Indigenous food systems can't scale up.

The other side of my Salish smoked salmon story is that, alongside the energy revolution that is taking place, we need a food revolution. We could do so much to fight climate change and restore the ecosystem if we reinvested in Indigenous food systems around the globe.

Elders say food is medicine. Maybe our food systems can be the medicine the earth needs to heal.

The picture is of my dinner plate, showing that we are all in this together. I don't eat 100% Indigenous foods. I don't have a magic bullet solution. I know that restoring these food systems will take work. I just think it might be a worthy endeavor for the benefit of generations to come.

Director's Report

Spring has Sprung!
Sierra Acton
CVRD Director for Shawnigan Lake

As the days get longer and warmer it is finally time to do some spring cleaning. To start the garage sale trend, The Shawnigan Lake Community Centre kicks off Spring with one the first Garage Sales of the season. By the time you read this publication I hope you are enjoying your new thrifty find from that sale. The Cowichan Lake community Centre is having one as well on May 13th, if you missed ours. In addition, there's always a big neighbourhood sale in the Beach Estates. Watch Facebook for details.

The new Rail with Trail Gateway Park (the lot recently acquired at the bottom of the Community Centre's driveway) is having some beauty work done. The grassy area is getting graded and cleaned up for a picnic area. Closer to the trail, the community can expect the Artistic bicycle racks and benches installation for rest spots along the trail. This project was spearheaded by The Shawnigan Residents Association. They acquired $25,000 in grant funding to help carry out this small part of the community's vision from the Think Shawnigan Plan.

The CVRD is still working on the new proposed bylaws that will greatly reduce the restrictions on suites and carriage houses in Area B. Stay tuned for the public hearing and sign up for notices at <https://www.cvrld.ca/list.aspx>

To celebrate Earth Day, I will be right there along with you and Eco Rotary for the earth day clean up on April 22nd. I hope to see you there.

With the power of social media, the topic of accessibility and sidewalks in the village is dominating the conversation about potential local improvements. Solving these issues was envisioned in the Think Shawnigan Plan. It is clear that this is still an important community goal that needs to be further discussed. Stay tuned!

As always, if you are interested in this or any other community issues, please reach out and let's discuss.

Pacific FC and St. John’s Academy Launch Youth Soccer

By Pacific Football Club and St. John’s Academy
Langford, BC
March 1, 2023

Pacific Football Club (PFC) and St. John’s Academy (SJA) announced a new partnership that will see the Canadian Premier League (CPL) club and the Shawnigan Lake-based independent school launch a youth soccer academy, The Football Academy, complete with coaching by Jamar Dixon, a retired Canadian professional soccer player and now the Manager of Football and Player Development for the Canadian Premier League club Pacific FC located in Langford.

“The objective of The Football Academy is to develop complete soccer players by focusing on specific fundamentals of the game such as team morale and culture, mental and physical aspects of the game, as well as technical and tactical awareness,” said Jamar Dixon, Academy Director.
“St. John’s Academy wants to create a safe and supportive environment where players can demonstrate their abilities while adapting to a unique coaching philosophy.”
The academy’s inaugural class will be comprised of Grade 9 and 10 male students, who will spend the first three hours of each school day practicing at Pacific’s Island Training Centre, followed by academic classes back on campus. Additional training will be offered to the student athletes in the early evenings. The academy will be offered to this group of students as they continue on through high school, adding academy grades each academic year, with plans to expand to female students in the future.

“Our goal is to provide students in the program with world-class learning and character development through education and soccer and to help them reach their highest potential as athletes, students, and citizens,” said Kimberly Edgson, a member of SJA’s Senior Educational Leadership Team.

“Vancouver Island is a hub for soccer, and we are creating an opportunity for our students to immerse themselves in the game while getting a top-notch education.”
Pacific FC has a robust youth program operating out of the Island Training Centre called the Vancouver Island Wave Program. Dixon has extensive experience coaching in that program along with other past and current Pacific FC players. Dixon’s coaching prowess includes winning the 2022 BCSPL Championship with the 2008 boys Wave team.

At the end of the day it's not about what you have done or even what you've accomplished...
it's about who you've lifted up,
who you've made better.
It's about what you've given back."
—Denzel Washington
